Anita baker body and soul

In this song, Baker wants to make sure he doesn't burn before he opens his heart again. It was written by the team of Ellen Shipley and Rick Nowels, who wrote most of Belinda Carlisle's speeches. In a songfacts interview with Shipley, he told the story behind it: it's probably something we do is my favorite song. I was sitting at my piano in Brooklyn and I started playing a three-quarter song. I had an idea called Body and Soul. Then I went back to L.A. to work with Rick. 'Body And Soul' also has a classic old-time feel that works now. This is where people are afraid to connect if they don't know exactly what the other person is feeling. What he wants to know is a very simple song because he's in it, he's in it, and he wants to know how he feels, because we don't always know. It was a choice on Billboard. Melodical, lyrical, passionate, he added. It's clear: it's a thought, and there's a lot of how people feel. It's a promise: will I promise this person? We need to know how they feel first. When Shipley and Nowels started writing this song, they had Hall & Oates in mind, but they realized it was much more suitable for Baker. They created a demo using a singer who looked a lot like Baker; The real Anita took it as soon as she heard the song.
